

FOR THE ORGANIZER

Running the whole drive

You set the auction up, decide when it opens and closes, and give the helpers the access they need. Each drive is its own auction, and each one starts its total from zero.

1 Create the auction

A name, the goal, and the payment and pickup instructions — those go out to every winner, so write them once and write them well.

Shown on the auction home page. A sentence or two is plenty.

Fundraising goal

2 Fill it and open it

Items start as drafts. Open for bidding puts them all live at once. Share the link and let it run.

Auctions

Each auction has its own items, goal and running total. Start a new one whenever the chapter fundraises again — the total begins at zero.

3 Give helpers their access

Least access that lets them do the job: cataloger for listing, treasurer for money and the live console.

People

Everyone who has signed up. Change what someone is allowed to do with the role picker — give helpers the least access that lets them do their job, so nobody can break the auction by accident.

Bidder

Can browse and bid. Everyone starts here.

Cataloger

Adds and edits items and photos. Can't open or close an auction, or see payments.

Treasurer

Runs the live auction console, works the winners list and marks payments. Can't change items or auctions.

Two things to check before you invite the chapter

Both appear as a banner in the organizer tools if they are wrong, and both are quick to fix.

Do the rehearsal

- ✓ A throwaway auction, one cheap item closing in ten minutes
- ✓ Bid from two accounts and let it close on its own
- ✓ Confirm the outbid email really lands in a real inbox

Watch for these

- ✗ A red banner means outbid and winner emails are not sending
- ✗ Brevo's free tier stops at 300 emails a day
- ✗ Assign the cataloger and treasurer roles while it is quiet

Closing the auction

Items close on their own clocks. Close auction ends anything still running immediately and notifies those winners.

Somebody locked out

People → Reset password gives you a one-time link to pass on. Requests from members appear at the top of the same page.

Next time, a new auction

Create another one and the goal and the total start from zero. The old drive stays as a record of what it raised.

Scan to open the auction

Sign in and the organizer tools appear in the menu. Share this same square with the chapter to bring people in.

Print the member sheets too — creating an account, placing a bid, and the live auction night.
