

How the live auction night works

A few of the best lots are held back from the online close and sold by an auctioneer on the night — with the room and the people at home bidding into the same lot.

1 Open the live page

Everyone watches the same page. It shows the lot on the block and the bid to beat, and refreshes itself every couple of seconds.

Live auction

Bidding alongside the room, lot by lot.

UNDER THE HAMMER NOW

Antique narra dining table

OPENING BID

₱5,000

0 bids

Bid ₱5,000

2 The room bids out loud

The auctioneer calls the lot. Somebody in the room raises a paddle, and an organizer records it against that paddle number.

Who bid?

Paddle 12, or a name

Amount

₱5,000

₱5,250

₱5,500

₱6,000

5000

Record room bid

Sold

No sale

Step away

3 You bid from home

Your bid goes into the same lot from the same page. When the auctioneer calls it sold, the winner is recorded there and then.

Live auction

Bidding alongside the room, lot by lot.

UNDER THE HAMMER NOW

Antique narra dining table

OPENING BID

₱5,000

0 bids

Bid ₱5,000

Whether you are in the hall or at home

One lot, one price, one running order. Nobody is bidding in a separate queue.

● In the room

- Raise your paddle and the auctioneer takes it
- An organizer records it against your paddle number
- You will hear the current bid called as it climbs

● At home

- The page shows the same lot and the same price
- Bid from it exactly as you would on any other item
- The auctioneer sees your bid and calls it to the room

Live lots do not close on a clock

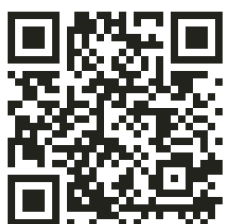

Online bidding beforehand sets the opening price. The lot ends when the auctioneer says sold, not at a set time.

If the hall's signal drops

The auctioneer keeps going on paper and the bids are entered afterwards. The night does not stop for a bad connection.

Winning a live lot

It joins the same winners list as everything else, with the same payment and pickup arrangements.

Scan to follow the live auction

Open the auction and tap Live auction. Have it open before the first lot is called.

Bidding from home? Sit somewhere with a decent signal — and keep the page open.

